OUTLOOK: High pressure will build over the northern tier of the western states bringing breezy and cooler weather with a few showers over the higher terrain. An onshore flow will continue for the entire Pacific coast. The southern Great Basin, California and the Southwest will continue to be warm and dry. High temperatures will range from the 50's to the 70's in the northern tier of the West. Highs in the 80's to 90's are expected for the remainder of the West, with a few readings near 100 in California and the desert Southwest. The potential for fire activity remains in California with continued warm and dry conditions.
